

Haneda Wins Runner-up Prize at the 2nd Japan Toilet Human Award

On 11 November 2017, Tokyo International Air Terminal Corporation (TIAT) was presented with the runner-up prize at the 2nd Japan Restroom Maintenance Engineer Award held by the non-profit organization, Japan Toilet Labo, with the objective of giving recognition to people involved in addressing social issues through efforts to improve the toilet and sanitary environment.

This year, the 192 cleaning personnel at the Maintenance Management Center (as of October 2017) were highly commended for providing a hygienic and comfortable restroom environment through their unceasing cleaning and maintenance work at the international terminal of Haneda Airport which serves customers continuously around the clock all year round.

Ever since its establishment, TIAT has continued to work in improving the sanitary environment of the terminal, including its restrooms, in pursuit of greater comfort. TIAT remains committed to this objective of offering a cleaner terminal that is more comfortable and pleasing to its customers, and is resolved to redouble its efforts in this area.
